

Extra grant for applicants with reduced functional ability for autumn 2019 and spring 2020

English

Not applicable to applicants for further education with youth entitlement

Who is entitled to receive an extra grant?

Extra grants may be given in addition to ordinary educational support. The extra grant amounts to NOK 3,763 per month. The grant is intended for applicants who are capable of studying, but due to reduced functional ability, use so much time and energy on their studies, that they cannot engage in paid employment while also studying, without this affecting their normal educational progress. A physician, specialist or other professional with particular knowledge of the reduced functional ability is required to confirm the application details. An assessment/review of the applicant's functional ability and how that may affect his/her ability to study in 2019–2020 must be performed. If a diagnosis from a previous year is provided, or a third party determined that the applicant has a reduced functional ability, no new diagnosis or assessment is required. However, the physician or the other professional must provide a separate assessment of how the reduced functional ability will affect the ability to study during the relevant application period. For the applicant to be entitled to receive an extra grant, the physician must confirm that the applicant, due to reduced functional ability, uses considerably more time and energy than other students on the same study programme. For example, he/she must use considerably more resources on reading the curriculum, or, due to mobility problems, has to use considerably more time and energy getting to and from the educational institution.
